

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A computing device capable of time sorting and its control method are disclosed, wherein a clock is embedded in the computing device for providing corresponding time parameters so as to sort and sum up the inputted income/expense values to be saved according to time parameters. Further, the summation of income values or expense values can be computed and displayed according to different time periods, such as the summation that occurred during each past day, each past week, each past month, each past season, each past year, etc.